Information on Review of Programmes for Accreditation

1.0 PROGRAMME REVIEW

Council on Higher Education (CHE) reviews all programmes offered in Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) in Lesotho in consultation with the institutions. In summary the process entails the following activities:

- a) Self-evaluation: The institution critically assesses its capacity to offer the programme using CHE Minimum Programme Accreditation Standards and compiles a self-evaluation report;
- b) Review: A panel of experts consisting of intellectuals and those representing the workplace/industry related to the programme review the report and other relevant documentation, conduct a site visit and interview institution stakeholders (in the case of a full review), and compile the review report using CHE's Minimum Programme Accreditation Standards as a frame of reference;
- c) Presentation of report to CHE: The report is presented to the Higher Education Quality Assurance Committee (HEQAC) of CHE and Council for approval;
- d) Improvement Plan: Upon receiving the report, the institution develops and implements the improvement plan under the guidance of CHE.

2.0 TYPES OF REVIEW

Full Review: A panel of at least 4 reviewers evaluates one existing or new programme by reading self-evaluation report together with other programme documentation, conducting a site visit and developing a review report.

Desk Review: A panel of at least 4 reviewers evaluates one new programme by reading the self-evaluation report together with other documentation and compiles a review report.

Partial Review: A panel of at least 2 reviewers evaluates one or more existing programmes by reading the self-evaluation report(s) together with other programme documentation and produces a review report.

3.0 DECISION FRAMEWORK

As described in CHE's Minimum Programme Accreditation Standards, the review covers a number of areas including goals and objectives of the programme, programme design, financing of the programme, staffing, quality assurance system, teaching and learning strategy, student support, research and innovation, and community engagement. There are two different types of programmes: (a) Existing programmes, and (b) new programmes.

The decision framework for existing programmes consists of the following five levels:

- (i) Full Accreditation: An existing programme that has been subjected to full review meets standards and is granted full accreditation for a period of five (5) years;
- (ii) Probationary Accreditation: An existing programme that has been subjected to full review partially meets standards and shows potential to fully meet the standards within two years. The programme is granted probationary accreditation for a period of two (2) years;
- (iii) Extended Probationary Accreditation: An existing programme that has been subjected to a partial review meets some of the key standards and is allowed five (5) years to address the concerns raised in the review report;
- (iv) Accreditation not Granted: An existing programme that has been subjected to full review does not meet minimum standards;
- (v) Accreditation Withdrawn: A previously accredited existing programme no longer meets minimum standards;

The decision framework for new programmes consists of two levels:

- (i) Admission to Candidacy: A new programme that has been subjected to either a full review or desk review meets most of the standards except those that can only be assessed when the programme is running. The programme is admitted to candidacy phase and allowed to run for two (2) years before it is subjected to full review;
- (ii) Admission to Candidacy not Granted: A new programme that has been subjected either to full review or desk review does not meet minimum standards. The programme is not allowed to candidacy phase and is not allowed to run.

Institutions whose programmes attain “Full Accreditation” or “Probationary Accreditation” or “Admission to Candidacy” develop and implement improvement plans under the guidance of CHE.

Those attaining the results “Accreditation not Granted” and “Accreditation Withdrawn” may have to stop taking new students and teach-out existing enrolments. Those attaining “Admission to Candidacy not Granted” cannot be offered but are revised and resubmitted for another round of review.
